

Evidence obtained as a result of a forensic procedure conducted on a person is inadmissible as part of the prosecution case if the statutory requirements have not been complied with, unless the prosecution satisfies the court on the balance of probabilities that the circumstances justify the reception of the evidence or the accused person consents to the reception of the evidence.

Evidence obtained as a result of a forensic procedure conducted on a person is inadmissible as part of the prosecution case if the statutory requirements have not been complied with, unless the prosecution satisfies the court on the balance of probabilities that the circumstances justify the reception of the evidence or the accused person consents to the reception of the evidence.