

Later that day, Daniels was caught between the wings when the Flyer was flipped by a gust of wind and destroyed. From that day forward, he never tired of telling people that he'd survived the very first plane crash.

Daniels later said that he was so excited by seeing the Flyer rising that he nearly forgot Orville Wright's instructions to squeeze the bulb triggering the shutter.